 REPULSION. n. f. [repulsus, Lat.] The act or power of driving off from itself.
 Air has some degree of tenacity, whereby the parts attract one another; at the same time, by their elasticity, the particles of air have a power of repulsion or flying off from one another. Arbutnot.
 REPULSIVE. adj. [from repulse.] Driving off; having the power to beat back or drive off.
 The parts of the salt or vitriol recede from one another, and endeavour to expand themselves, and get as far asunder as the quantity of water, in which they float, will allow; and does not this endeavour imply, that they have a repulsive force by which they fly from one another, or that they attract the water more strongly than one another? Newton's Opticks.
 TO REPURCHASE. v. a. [re and purchase.] To buy again.
 Once more we sit on England's royal throne,
 Repurchas'd with the blood of enemies;
 What valiant foe-men, like to autumn's corn,
 Have we mow'd down in top of all their pride? Shakefp.
 If the son alien those lands, and repurchase them again in fee, the rules of descent are to be observed, as if he were the original purchaser. Hale's Law of England.
 REPUTABLE. adj. [from repute.] Honourable; not infamous.
 If ever any vice shall become reputable, and be gloried in as a mark of greatness, what can we then expect from the man of honour, but to signalize himself. Rogers's Sermons.
 In the article of danger, it is as reputable to elude an enemy as defeat one. Broom.
 REPUTABLY. adv. [from reputable.] Without discredit.
 To many such worthy magistrates, who have thus reputably filled the chief seats of power in this great city, I am now addressing my discourse. Atterbury's Sermons.
 REPUTATION. n. f. [reputation, Fr. from repute.] Credit; honour; character of good.
 Reputation is an idle and most false imposition; oft got without merit, and lost without deserving; you have lost no reputation at all, unless you repute yourself such a loser. Shak.
 Verily, upon the lake of Geneva, has the reputation of being extremely poor and beggarly. Addison.
 A third interprets motions, looks and eyes;
 At every word a reputation dies. Pope's Rape of the Lock.

 And to the battle came he. Shakefp. Coriolanus.
 REQUIEM. n. f. [Latin.]
 1. A hymn in which they implore for the dead requiem or rest.
 We should profane the service of the dead,
 To sing a requiem and such peace to her;
 As to peace-parted souls. Shakefp.
 2. Rest; quiet; peace. Not in use.
 The midwife kneel'd at my mother's throes,
 With pain produc'd, and nurs'd for future woes;
 Else had I an eternal requiem kept,
 And in the arms of peace for ever slept. Sandys.
 REQUIRABLE. adj. [from require.] Fit to be required.
 It contains the certain periods of times, and all circumstances requirable in a history to inform. Hale.
 TO REQUIRE. v. a. [require, Lat. requirer, Fr.]
 1. To demand; to ask a thing as of right,
 Ye me require
 A thing without the compals of my wit;
 For both the lineage and the certain fire,
 From which I sprung, are from me hidden yet. Spenser.
 We do require them of you, so to use them,
 As we shall find their merits. Shakefp. King Lear.
 This, the very law of nature teacheth us to do; and this the law of God requirerth also at our hands. Spelman.
 This imply'd
